

The MLA Citation Format (The 7th Edition)

Citing Sources within the Text

You must cite all of the information you have found in books, magazine articles, and websites. This includes facts, statistics, direct quotes, or ideas that someone else has written and you are including in your research paper or presentation. Usually, all you need to cite within the text is the author's last name and the page number, if it is available.

Works Cited Page

At the end of your paper, you will need to list your sources. Please follow these instructions.

- The "Works cited" page should be at the end of the paper and on a new page.
- At the top center, you should have "Works Cited" an inch from the top of the page.
- Double space.
- The first line of every citation should be at the left margin.
- If the citation goes to a second or more line, indent one-half inches (or 5 spaces) from the left.
- Capitalize the first letter of the title of all books, magazines, magazine titles, database names, or websites.
- Put the citations in alphabetical order by the left-most word or name.
